

We've changed our product names, but not our products

On Monday, August 15, we changed our product names. As our product line expands, we believe this new descriptive naming will help everyone find the right Lunera product faster.

The website, cut sheets, installation guides, application notes, case studies and FreshDesk all reflect the change. Our new product catalog, which became available online on Monday, uses the new names as well. You'll also see that all of our standard ballast and line driven lamp documents, box labels, and markings on the products are now in gray.

The product specifications have not changed and neither have the SKUs.
